

European Coalition of Cities against Racism

General Information

The Coalition of Cities against Racism is an initiative launched by UNESCO in 2004 to establish a network of cities interested in sharing experiences in order to improve their policies to fight racism, discrimination and xenophobia.

The international conventions, recommendations and declarations elaborated at the upstream level need to be ratified and implemented by the States. At the same time, it is extremely important to involve actors on the ground, including the targets of discrimination, to make sure that those international and national instruments are applied and respond to concrete problems. In times of growing globalization and urbanization the municipalities are a key factor in ensuring that all their citizens, regardless of their nationality, ethnic, cultural, religious or social origin, can live in dignity, security and justice.

With this in mind, UNESCO aims at establishing an "International Coalition of Cities Against Racism", an initiative which is expressly supported by the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights and the world's largest organization of municipalities, United Cities and Local Governments.

The European Coalition of Cities Against Racism

On 10th of December 2004, the "European Coalition of Cities Against Racism" (ECCAR) was established in Nuremberg, and a "Ten-Point-Plan of Action" was adopted. In order to strengthen the Coalition, the member cities decided to give a legal framework to the network: on 21st of February 2008 the "European Coalition of Cities Against Racism" was declared Registered Association by the District Court of Nuremberg and its name was entered into the Register of Associations.

The Coalition set itself the following goals:

- Fighting any form of racism and discrimination at a municipal level and thus making a contribution to safeguarding and promoting human rights and respect for diversity in Europe;
- supporting member cities in this task via the "Ten-Point-Plan of Action", which was adopted in Nuremberg on 10th of December 2004, and assisting them in establishing priorities, optimizing their strategies and intensifying their co-operation;

- representing and promoting the common interests of member cities at the European Union, the Council of Europe and with the governments of European states;
- strengthening the co-operation with institutions and organizations which are also committed to fighting racism and discrimination, as well as with other European municipal networks;
- sensitizing the European public to the values of a just and solidarity-based society and motivating the public to promote equality and to counteract with determination any racist or discriminatory opinion and behavior.

In the meantime, municipalities from 23 European countries have joined the network and adopted the "Ten-Point-Plan of Action".
